Laura Karolinna Rincón Cortés

Nowadays, it is impossible to contemplate a life without a cellphone or wifi connection and the reason is not for free, our attention have been trained over decades to be dissipate in not important things, not only with the arrival of internet, also with newspaper, tv or novelty aspects.

In first place, our attention must not be considered as a side-effect of technology, because the problem is not the existence of it, the problem is the purpose that we have when we consume it. Humans can not stop learning, in one form or another, we continue learning throughout our lives, including this addictive content that tech institution insist of creating to distract us from real world.

Multitasking constitutes a several effect of non stopping to consume, but we have the responsability of two main aspects, to educate creators and consumers, to realise what we are consuming and to have a real purpose just as entertaining as that which keeps us distracted.

What's your opinion?

AVERAGE!