Control yourself

It is not a secret that nowadays people are less capable of concentrating, developing critical thinking or learning due to many factors but the most dangerous is technology because people start to delegate all their tasks to technology and it is evident that it is a tool but when we start to allow it to think for us, there is where the problem lies.

In the episode "Are New Media shortening Attention Spans?: How Digital Technology Shapes Us" we can see how multitasking causes different problems in human brain for example, it makes us less capable of concentrating in only one thing because it overstimulates us deteriorating our attention. This overstimulation is also a cause of the constant use of technology because internet accustomes us to have little moments of retention because their post are short and fast. It is as the episode shows: A similar effect to eat suggar. It generates an addiction

That is why, in my opinion, people should autoregulate themselves and understand the problem and the future psychological problems they could have if they do not start to safe their brain. For example, I consider my retention now is less than when I was in second semester due to not only my use of technology but also the constant saturation of advertisements with AI so we can understand it is easy sometimes to use it, but it rests us responsibility and skills. That is why I reduce the use of that and my time on screens. So people could use a chronomet day by day to use technology or parental control on ~~their~~ OR phones to try to control anxiety and also try to use AI only when they finished their attempts to think by themselves.

VERY GOOD!
